Of course our reply is the stereotyped one: "We don't known and are not liable to until Council meets," and from the number of times we have made this answer we should enjoy a little immunity, but each succeeding day of silence on the part of the committee appears only to aggravate the succeeding day of silence on the part of the committee appears only to aggravate the consuming desire of the curiosity seekers. Yesterday we met a citizen who gave us the following: "I was told to-day, on good anthority, that the committee at present stand four for sustaining the charges and for the removal of the Sergeant, and two for not sustaining the charges. Sweeney himself told me this. I also understand that the only drawback at present is has the city any authority. at present is, has the city any authority for removing Sweeney? On this point reference was had to the City Solicitor for removing Sweeney? On this reference was had to the City So for his opinion in the matter, and further proceedings pend his answer. This, Mr. Reporter, said the citizen as he turned to go, you may rely on, as I got it straight, and Sweeney is telling it himself." One of the committee told us last night that the report, which is very voluminous, is concluded, and will be presented at the Tuesday night session of Council.

The social meeting held in the Temperance Reading Room, Ott's Hall, on Thursday night, was a most enjoyable occasion. There was some spirited singing, and addresses by Messrs. Frank Cline and Bayliss. Four persons signed the pledge. STREET CLEANING.-The Committee or STREET CLEANING.—The Committee on Streets, Alleys and Grades, at their recent meeting, canvassed the budget of bids for cleaning the streets of the various districts, into which the city is divided, and recommended to Council those whose bids had been the lowest and best, but they also qualified their recommendation by a suggestion, or rather another recommendation that the present system be abandoned, and the work of cleaning the streets imposed upon the Street Commisstreets imposed upon the Street Commis-sioner subject to the same conditions that sioner subject to the same conditions that reimposal upon the contractors.

The committee were impelled to this action for two reasons: First, there is no directing power in the matter. Council advertises for contractors to do the work. The contracts are awarded in many instances to irresponsible parties, and it can not be otherwise, as no bond for the performance of duty is required or given, and the only condition is that 20 or 30 per cent of the award is retained. During the summer months when this work is almost nothing they do their work after a manner, draw their money, and are happy, but when in the winter they are confronted with the mud and mire in some of streets, they throw up the contract and quit. We are all the contract and quit. scale, requiring really the services of two ordinary companies to portray it, and also by the careful, spirited acting Mr. Byron throws into it, in the leading part of 'The Ferret.' There are few parts of the country that have not seen and applauded the characteristic American work, which itself includes widely varying scenes taken from the heart of New York and from the wild gorges of the Rocky Mountains respectively. Not only is there exciting melodrama, hairbreadth escapes, and a grand closing tableau of rescue by 'United States troops,' but in the prologue there is a full concert scene, giving half an hour's agreeable interlude of fun and minstrelsy by capable performers."

This troupe will show in the Opera House Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week. We are all thoroughly conversant with the condition of the streets, and more particularly those in the 8th, 4th, 1st and 7th wards, which were well nigh impassable. Another reason is that the work is not done, and the money thus paid out is as good as lost. The contract, as we have already indicated, is not binding, and of course, action on the part of contractors only optional. On the other band, it is claimed that was the work in the hands of the Street Com-On the other band, it is claimed that was the work in the hands of the Street Commissioner it would be done, and done infinitely better than it is at any season. —Of all the American women who have had the grit to attempt anything "masculine," Anna E. Dickinson is by far the grittlest and most versatile, and so far as elocutionary or oratorical powers are concerned she stands pre-eminent among her Lamp contest—Day. Holley and John Warner.

HARD TO ANSWER.—To the reporters of the press the members of the Sweeney investigating committee have preserved an oyster like silence, saying, "We shall not anticipate our report to Council." This silence is all right as an abstract principle and any diveigment under the circumstances would be wrong, but it is hard to get this idea through the hair of the average quid nunc for a bundred times a day are we assailed with the connundrum:

"Well what's new in the Sweeney matter?"

Of course our reply is the stereotyped one: "We don't known and are not liable to until Council meets," and from the number of times we have made this answer we should enjoy all title immunity, but each succeeding day of silence on the part of the committee appears only to agrayate the "Aurelia or Rome" Restorer." which is
